The College of Intensive Care Medicine of Australia and New Zealand supports global collaboration and respect

Rob Bevan, Charlie Corke, Raymond Raper, Mary Pinder, Ross Freebairn, Bala Venkatesh, Dianne Stephens, Gavin Joynt, Peter Morley, Rinaldo Bellomo, Sarah Yong, Stephen Jacobe, Felicity Hawker, Michael Ashbolt, Stephen Lam and Benoj Varghese

The College of Intensive Care Medicine of Australia and New Zealand (the College) is the organisation responsible for the training of intensive care medicine (ICM) specialists in Australia and New Zealand. In its strategic plan, the College is committed to achieving the best health outcomes for critically ill patients through training high-quality specialists, increasing specialty knowledge and improving standards of care. The College identifies five core values, represented by the acronym I-CARE (Box 1).

In line with the position statement made by the Australian and New Zealand Intensive Care Society (ANZICS), the College believes that to achieve the best outcomes for critically ill patients, international collaboration, in the form of freedom of speech, the celebration of difference, and respect for those of all genders, faiths, ethnicities and places of birth, is essential.

The United States has long been regarded as a major contributor to the practice and knowledge of ICM. In 2017, several presidential executive orders have been signed, one of which (13769, “Protecting the nation from foreign terrorist entry”) specifically restricts travel to the US for individuals (termed “aliens”) based on their country of birth. At the time of writing, the latest iteration of the order had relaxed the ban on dual nationals travelling on passports from certain countries. There remains the onus on individuals to convince the border protection officer that “entry would not pose a threat to national security and would be in the national interest” in order to obtain a waiver.

There are Fellows of the College who originate from countries identified in the order as high risk, and no justification has been given about why they would pose a terrorist threat if they travel to the US. Because of concerns about the implications these restrictions could place on scientific collaboration, the College successfully petitioned the Australian Council of Presidents of Medical Colleges (CPMC) to issue a statement on this issue (Box 2).

Freedom of travel and freedom of speech have enabled ICM specialists from our region to participate in global collaboration, which is essential to spur innovation and further the interests of patients around the world. The College believes that any law which is inherently discriminatory or suppresses a free exchange of ideas is contrary to our values.

There are justifiable arguments that governments are unlikely to acknowledge the views of the College, ANZICS or the CPMC, but we recognise the historical consequences of not speaking out about discrimination. On behalf of the College of Intensive Care Medicine Fellows and in the interests of our core values, the board of the College of Intensive Care Medicine of Australia and New Zealand is speaking out.

Competing interests
None declared.

Author details
Rob Bevan Dianne Stephens Felicity Hawker
Charlie Corke Gavin Joynt Michael Ashbolt
Raymond Raper Peter Morley Stephen Lam
Mary Pinder Rinaldo Bellomo Benoj Varghese
Ross Freebairn Sarah Yong
Bala Venkatesh Stephen Jacobe

The College of Intensive Care Medicine of Australia and New Zealand, Melbourne, VIC, Australia.

Correspondence: drrsbevan@gmail.com

Box 1. College of Intensive Care Medicine core values
Integrity: Adhering to moral and ethical principles and practice
Collaboration, leadership and teamwork: Working together to achieve the best outcome
Accountability and responsibility: To our patients and their families; to our communities and our colleagues
Respect and compassion: Being sympathetic and empathetic
Excellence: In all aspects of intensive care practice

Box 2. Australian Council of Presidents of Medical Colleges (CPMC) statement on freedom of engagement of medical professionals
The CPMC supports the freedom of engagement of medical professionals to improve and advance medical practice across the world. Equitable access for medical delegates from across the world to countries that host international medical congresses and meetings is important to support this goal.
SPECIAL COMMUNICATION

References

▶ Are you getting InSight?
NEWS AND RESEARCH • COMMENT • INSIGHTS

MJA InSight is a free, weekly e-newsletter, from the publishers of the Medical Journal of Australia, which allows you to click through to the user-friendly InSight website for the latest news and views on medicine and health.

With access to the MJA’s expertise, knowledge and resources, MJA InSight provides you with analysis of clinical news from peer-reviewed journals, informed comments from Australia’s leading health and medical experts, and thought-provoking blogs.

You can join the conversation via online feedback.

▶ It is free to register – just go to https://www.mja.com.au/user/register?subscribe=insight

MJA InSight offers the medical profession high-quality, informative and interesting content in an informal, online format.

Don’t miss your weekly dose!

116
Critical Care and Resuscitation • Volume 19 Number 2 • June 2017