

SURVEY

You are invited to participate in a study exploring attitudes towards work life balance and job satisfaction in intensive care medicine. As a trainee or Fellow of CICM you are eligible to take part in this study and your participation is much appreciated.

Achieving a satisfactory work life balance is a challenge faced by many with careers in health care and a lack of such may constitute an important barrier to practice in intensive care medicine. This survey aims to explore factors that contribute to job satisfaction and a satisfactory work life balance and identify levels of stress and burnout among trainees and specialists.

This survey contains questions related to your role at work, your working conditions, home life, children and interests.

Your consent for participation is implied through submission of the survey and you can withdraw from the study anytime until the final submission.

All responses are anonymous and data will be disposed of after the completion of this project.

The survey will take around 5 minutes to complete.

We warmly thank you for your participation,

Stephanie McKelvie
MBBS 4th Year
Monash University

Dr David Brewster
Deputy Director of ICU
Cabrini

Dr Felicity Hawker
Honorary ICU Consultant
Cabrini

Shannon Simpson
ICU Research Director
Cabrini

---

This study has been approved by the Cabrini Human Research Ethics Committee. Questions or complaints can be directed to:

Jennifer Burden
Cabrini Human Research Ethics Committee
& Research Governance
Phone: (03) 9508 3440
Email: jburden@cabrini.com.au